Getting Connected, Staying Wired.....

July 5, 2012

Similar to most projects undertaken in life, when building out home or office furniture systems, the devil is the details.

Vertebra Channel

Whether you are dealing with a single home work space, multiple use office cubicle scenarios or even giving your kitchen a "lighting face lift", the challenge of effectively staging power, voice or data lines will need to be addressed.

For years, wire and cable management solutions pretty much consisted of conduit, electrical tape and "covering things up with rugs". No more.

Amateur and professional designers today have a variety of unique, utilitarian choices to hide and protect the proliferation of wire applications called for by the high-tech environment even the most basic space can enjoy. These "veins and arteries" of the tech world can become a PART of design, as shown by the pictured Vertebra Channel Wire Management System.

Thoughtful integration of grommets, surface, floor or belt line products not only can add aesthetic appeal, but protect the connections that matter. Take a minute and browse through the suite of products available at www.eventhorizonpvdc.com. Or call one of our support techs at 1-888-801-4189 for real time assistance.

Commitment to Sustainability

Cognizant of the importance of sustainability and the desire to deliver affordable "green solutions", the company stays abreast of all environmentally friendly power, voice, data and communication products. We feature a select grouping of green products as stand alone or easily integrated work space pieces.

A wide variety of grommets and all standoffs are 75% recycled aluminum. The company has recently added lines of reclaimed furniture including work and home tables made from reclaimed metals. We understand the importance of ergonomics in promoting a healthful and efficient work environment and stock chairs, keyboard trays and storage systems that are user friendly and affordable. www.eventhorizonpvdc.com
